Pastor's Report

As we continue to struggle through the sexual abuse scandal that is torturing our beloved Church with what it sure to be a purifying fire, I wanted to share with you a few thoughts on one particular dimension of it that needs to be rectified if the culture is to be purified. It is the problem of homosexuality in the clergy.

Of course, it is possible for persons with homosexual inclinations to live good, chaste and holy lives. I firmly believe many do so and contribute beneficially to the beauty of the Church. However, the Church has always and will always prohibit persons with deep seated homosexual inclination to enter the priesthood. In fact, as recently as the pontificate of Benedict XVI, there was a directive from the Church mandating this policy, and for very good reasons.

To see why such a policy is necessary, one needs only to understand the dynamics of every loving relationship. All loving relationships begin on a very superficial level (think about how uncomfortable first dates are). There is a lot of walking on eggshells. There is a tremendous fear of rejection, and everyone is attempting to put their best foot forward. As the relationship develops, however, all that awkwardness eventually dissipates as the couple feels comfortable sharing who they really are. If they find out that they share core values, if they have common hopes, dreams, fears and likes, if they see someone they identify more completely with, they fall in love. The more they open up, the deeper in love they fall. Of course, if you add prayer to this equation, it adds a whole additional layer of intimacy since the most intimate thing one can do with another is pray with them.

This always leads to physical intimacy (think of kissing). Couples that grow in relationship desire to express this relationship by moving closer and closer together physically. Unfortunately, because we live in such a pornographic society, deep intimacy is often equated with sexual intimacy. And because contraception makes discovery of sexual intimacy less likely, almost inevitably, the relationship turns sexual. As a result, very few couples, even those that strive mightily to live their Catholic faith, enter into marriage as virgins.

Something similar happens in seminary. Seminary is very much like a fraternity in that you have a group of men that are choosing to live together as a brotherhood. There are some important differences, however. In a seminary, the closeness of a fraternity is amplified because seminarians are, essentially, all choosing the same major. All are taking the same classes, and, as a result, all are experiencing the same sorrows and joys. When this is combined with prayer, the level of closeness explodes. As a result, seminarians become closer with each other, more of a brotherhood, than even the tightest knit fraternities. Often seminarians share with each other very personal details because they, like the couple falling in love, start to open up as they feel more and more comfortable with certain individuals.

If the seminarians are sexually attracted to each other, the same kind of physical expression that a couple experiences is going to be desired. Once a seminarian opens up about his sexual orientation to another, whether that other is a seminarian, priest or even bishop, they now share a secret. As long as both keep that secret, they are free to act on it as they wish. There is no possibility of discovery.

Think of it this way. If I were living in a sorority, with all kinds of women of the same age, with the same core values, same goals and interests, same hopes and joys, same common experiences, and no possibility of discovery due to pregnancy and the ability to share secrets, there's no way in the world my chastity is going to survive. This is the problem with men with homosexual inclinations in the seminary. Even if they aren't acting out with others, the temptations against chastity are astronomical.

Compounding these factors is the reality that likeminded individuals tend to group together. This struck me profoundly for the first time when I entered college. I notice that black students always sat together and no white students ever joined them. Then I notice, all the band students did the same, as well as the ROTC students, athletic students...you get the picture. None of this was malicious or stand-off-ish. It was just the very understandable fact that we generally like to hang out with those we identify with.

The same thing happens with seminarians with homosexual inclinations that become priests, especially when it cemented with a shared secret because these inclination have been acted upon. These priests, in turn, associate with likeminded priests, with whom this secret is shared. As priests become bishops and cardinals, they stick together, not only because of their shared identity, but also their shared secret. In fact, their shared secret necessitates they surround themselves with each other, in order to protect that secret.

This is part of the reason why the Church is in the mess it's in. So many cardinals, bishops and priests with deep-seated homosexual inclinations have bonded together over a shared secret, and all that has to be removed and the secret has to be exposed if these networks are going to be destroyed. Of course, the shared secret, may, but not always, involve minors. When it does, it needs to be turned over to the proper authorities so penance can be done through the punishment meted out by the court system.

But, one may ask, if the Church prohibits men with deep seated homosexual orientations to be ordained, how did it ever happen? Well, first of all by infiltration. Some men lied and manipulated the system. These men, then started to soften the Church's approach by effecting a sort of "don't ask, don't tell" mentality. Now, as we can see clearly, there is a movement, even in the Church, to legitimize homosexual behavior. This is the last and most devastating attack on the Church and it is why I believe the Holy Spirit is behind the exposure of our current crisis. The Church can never go this far. So the Holy Spirit is intervening to put an end to this nonsense.

Of course, this will be very ugly. But, there is no doubt in my mind that the current crisis in the Church is a profound movement of the Holy Spirit, purifying us with his all consuming fire. Like the burning sensation of fire, this will hurt, and hurt badly. But the gold that remains after the refining process will be that much more beautiful because it is that much purer.

HOLY FAMILY PARISH POLICIES & SPIRITUAL ACTIVITIES

As the weather gets warmer, especially during these mid-summer months, life gets a little less formal. To my mind, there's nothing wrong with that. However, there are a couple of things we want to keep in mind so as to not let our informality become an issue at Mass. (1) The Church, as the home of Jesus Christ, is a sacred space. As such, the clothes we might wear to a ball game, to the river or to the supermarket are not the clothes we should be wearing for Mass. While it's true that it is better to go to Mass in informal clothing than not going at all, it is equally true that making the sacrifice to dress nicely for Mass is better than not making that sacrifice.

(2) In our desire for comfort, it is important to remember the principles of modesty. Modesty necessitates wearing clothing, especially to Mass, that draws attention to our faces rather than some other part of our anatomy. Even though the church buildings can sometimes get quite warm in the summer, it is preferable to suffer a little inconvenience for an hour or so than to be a distraction for someone trying to focus on the Lord. -Fr. Olsen

SUMMER IS HEATING UP FAST! SO SHOULD YOUR FAITH! Make it happen by picking up a Lighthouse Catholic Media book or CD in the back of church today!
